

The Goals of Pure Water, Pure Love

To provide missionaries with water filters that supply their families with clean water.

To provide clean water for the people the missionaries serve as well.

What kinds of filters do the missionaries receive?

The leadership of PWPL works with the medical staff at the International Mission Board to determine the best quality filters for missionaries.

Typically, missionaries receive a drip filter. With a drip filter, the missionaries can pour in dirty water, and the filter removes disease-carrying microorganisms. Missionaries can also receive filter pumps and water bottles that filter water while traveling. Tablets and chemical purifiers are also available for the missionaries.

Small and large opportunities

The cost of a filter ranges from a $50 personal water bottle to a $250 home unit. The initial cost for a missionary family is $400 – $500. This provides the family with a home unit, travel-sized filters, and replacement filters.

The cost of a Well project is determined by the location and its needs. Well projects in the past have cost anywhere from $2000 – $20,000.

Fund a project

PWPL works with churches, Christian organizations, and missionaries to provide clean drinking water through well drilling or water purification systems.

Eligibility

We grant to Christian organizations with a preference to Baptists. Preference will be given to partnerships with churches and associations.

What my church can do

How much does my church need to donate?

Your church's contribution is combined with the contributions or other individuals, churches and organizations. There is no minimum amount.

Can we donate for use in a specific country?

PWPL uses a grant process for well projects. We cannot know where the projects will be until the committee approves an application. PWPL partners with already established Christian organizations and individuals currently at work in an area. Any donations designated to specific areas cannot be used until a grant application comes from within that country.

Can we know which missionary or country receives the filter or well from our gift?

Many missionaries who receive PWPL grants are in high-security areas. We cannot put them at risk by sharing specific names. We do have anonymous stories of well projects and filter recipients you can share with your church.

Can we apply for a PWPL grant for a missionary our church is partnering with?

Yes! We love working through partnerships that already exist between local churches/organizations and global missions.
