

How to set up your Youth on Mission group

WHEN

Student missions discipleship groups usually meet when adults are involved in regular church activities such as midweek prayer services, worship services, or choir rehearsals. A church may have a set time when all age-level missions discipleship groups meet. Youth on Mission would take place at that time. Other times and meeting places are possible with adequate support and leadership.

Materials are developed for weekly sessions of one hour in length or drop-in sessions within a framework of existing youth ministry. This can be adjusted by the church as needed, such as for monthly sessions. The session length of time is easily adjusted for longer or shorter sessions.

WHERE

Most student missions discipleship groups meet at the church. Youth on Mission are flexible and may also meet in a family's home or a community center.

HOW

Student missions discipleship groups are designed to be flexible in how they are organized in a church. No matter how Youth on Mission is structured in the church, efforts to lead students in missions discipleship must be undergirded with prayer.

Student missions discipleship groups are organized according to the needs of the church and groups can be formed in many different ways.

- Co-ed: Boys and girls can meet together as a Youth on Mission group. Leaders can determine the size of the groups and the number of groups needed based on church safety and security for students.
- Groups can be divided by age with 7th – 9th grades and 10th – 12th grades meeting separately if groups size and leader availability permit.
