

Churchwide

Missions leaders serve a vital role in the church. They help fulfill the Great Commission as they promote

- missions involvement and giving in their churches;
- missions discipleship opportunities through churchwide awareness events and studies;
- age-level missions discipleship groups (outlined in this booklet); and
- emerging leadership for the future of missions involvement.

The following WMU resources help churches by putting an easy-to-implement resource in the hands of a faithful member and immediately give your church a plan for fulfilling its role in the Great Commission.

Missions Leader: WMU Planning Guide

Missions Leader gives you what you need for annual and quarterly planning of missions discipleship and involvement, ideas and plans for growing and developing your leadership team, the big picture of WMU's missions discipleship curriculum study plan for the year, and ways to be involved in missions through compassion ministries.

This comprehensive guide provides practical ideas you can use and modify to fit the needs of your church and help everyone in your congregation grow in their understanding of and passion for missions.

How to Lead

Our website is loaded with information that will help leaders of preschoolers, children, students, and adults better relate to these various age-levels and understand ways they learn. See wmu.com for great teaching insight.

Leadership Courses

From online, on-demand courses, to print and web resources, to in-person training, WMU offers a variety of opportunities for discovering and expanding one's leadership skills and spiritual gifts. One of these approaches is leadership development through Christian Women's Leadership Center™ (CWLCTM). CWLCTM courses are self-paced and on-demand.

In addition, WMU offers minicourses related to WMU Compassion Ministries and a church's response to ministry needs such as mental health, refugees, human trafficking, and poverty, as well as courses related to Christian Women's Job Corps®/Christian Men's Job Corps® training. See ChristianLeaderLearning.com for the full catalog of courses.
